ECKLES ON SILVER.

Agitation Will Cease as People Come to Understand the Question.

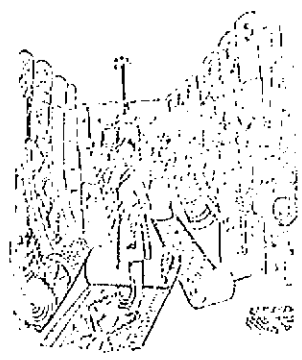

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 1.—Hon. James H. Eckles, comptroller of the currency, was guest of the Omaha Clearing House Association at the Omaha Club last night. Among the distinguished company who assembled to meet Mr. Eckles was Hon. John Sterling Morton, ex-Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. Eckles, in responding to the call for a speech, said: "Here in this Western country is contained all that goes to make a country rich, whether in mineral resources or agricultural products. It is complained not infrequently by the people of the West that the people of the East are ignorant of the West and the riches here to be found.

"The East is not ignorant of the number of political factions which exist in the state of Nebraska, the state of Colorado and other equally rich and important commonwealths, even though it may be ignorant of the richness of the soil here and the agricultural and mineral resources of your sister states. No political conditions can be to the advantage of any people where there are so many factions as have been bred in these Western countries within the last few years."

Coming to the silver question, Mr. Eckles said: "The metal which it is demanded shall by legislative fiat again take its place among the great monetary metals of the commercial world lost its place in its transactions, not through any prejudice against it, not through the demand of the bankers or the business men of any country that the volume of the world's money might be diminished by one half; but, instead, for the simple reason that silver no longer best answered the interests of commerce in bringing about the transfer of property from one individual to another in the best way. The agitation will die as people come to understand the question. The East and the West must stand together, that each may enjoy the full measure of prosperity now dawning."

Chicago to Take Possession of the Pullman Streets.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The city of Chicago will probably take possession of the streets in the town of Pullman. Corporation Counsel Thornton has decided that the public has the right in, on and under these streets that it has with the other public thoroughfares in the city. This decision is expected to give Chicago possession of between ten and fifteen miles of improved streets in Pullman. A legal fight with the Pullman palace car and the Pullman land association may ensue.

WILL YOU LOOK AT OUR

You people who want good carpets for little money? Examination is all we ask—all we need to ask. Examination means the sale, possibly not on the examination day, but when the next carpet is needed. There are very few people who after making sure they can save on their carpet money, will buy elsewhere. We mean just what we say here, every word of it. We can save you money on carpets. The manufacturers have advanced the price of carpets. We bought before the advance. It will pay you to anticipate and buy now if in want of carpets of any kind. STRAW MATTINGS, OILCLOTHS.

A NEW REVENUE DISTRICT.

NEWPORT, Vt., Oct. 1.—A new revenue district, comprising the counties now constituting the Second Congressional district of Vermont, to be known as the customs district of Memphremagog, began its existence today. Newport is the port of entry, where Hon. Z. M. Mansur of Island Pond, the recently appointed collector, will reside, and North Troy, Derby Line, Island Pond, Canaan and Beecher Falls are sub-ports.

The act under which the new district was constituted provides that merchandise arriving at either of the frontier ports named can be transported without appraisement to any other port of entry entitled under the law to this privilege, and vice versa. Until the enactment of this law the port of Burlington was the only port in Vermont to which and from which such merchandise could be transported, and the people of the northern part of the state express great satisfaction at the increased facilities which will be afforded under the new conditions. The old sub-port building here has been enlarged and remodeled to meet the need of the increasing business, but the citizens are already hoping that a government building will be erected soon.

The officers of the new district, besides Collector Mansur, are Special Deputy Collector Louis Follett, Cashier Benjamin F. Paine, Auditor Charles A. Bancroft, Deputy Collector and Inspector John T. Howell.

Sealing Season Not Unprofitable.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—United States steamer Richard Rush, from Unalaska, brings news from the sealing fleet, showing that the season has been by no means an unprofitable one. The catch as far as known is as follows: Triumph, 1,500; Alaska, 921; Dora Seward, 1,254; E. B. Marvin, 953; Zillah May, 622; Enterprise, 503; City of San Diego, 402; Beatrice, 381; Marie Taylor, 365; Victoria, 776; Annie E. Paint, 595; Teresa, 730; Elsie, 215; St. Lawrence, 849; J. E. Peppiner, 443.

Provisions Enough at Dawson.

VICTORIA, British Columbia, Oct. 1.—William O'Gilvie, Dominion government surveyor in the Yukon country, has arrived in Victoria. He says there are provisions enough at Dawson for four thousand people for the winter. When he left Dawson City July 15 there were eight thousand there, but if, as reported, many have left since then, the situation will not be so bad as feared.

British Lancers Attacked by Afridis.

PESHAWUR, Oct. 1.—The Afridis attacked a patrol of British lancers near Fort Bara this morning. It was an unpleasant surprise to the British commanders to find that the enemy has ventured so close to Peshawur. Fort Bara is only a few miles distant from here.

SIMLA, Oct. 1.—The Ameer of Afghanistan has ordered the arrest of any Afridi Jirgahs appearing at Cabul.

Weakness of the Pope Increasing.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Globe this afternoon says it hears that the pope's weakness is increasing, and that the church dignitaries are afraid he will not rally from the extreme feebleness and exhaustion he now betrays.

Pottsville Reorganization Plan.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Oct. 1.—The Pottsville Iron and Steel Company, which went into receivers' hands several months ago, has formulated plans of reorganization by which the plant may resume and give employment to one thousand hands. It is proposed to issue first-mortgage bonds amounting to $3,000,000 for rehabilitating the mills, and for a working capital. The preferred creditors will accept second-mortgage bonds to satisfy their claims of about $1,500,000, and the unpreferred creditors will be given $450,000 in preferred stock.

BECAUSE OF THE QUARANTINE.

Southern Pacific Closes Its Gulf Route to Freight Traffic.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—In consequence of the yellow fever quarantine in the Southern states, the Southern Pacific company has decided to close its Gulf route to all freight traffic. Arrangements have been perfected by the Southern Pacific with the Texas & Pacific, whereby connection may be had with New Orleans and other points in the southern part of Louisiana. Through freight for the East will also be turned over to the Texas & Pacific at El Paso. The passenger department of the company has decided to run the Sunset Limited to Chicago instead of New Orleans this winter.

CONFINED IN NARROW LIMITS.

Revolution in Guatemala Greatly Exaggerated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—According to Consul General Miguel Castillo of this city and Consul General Joaquin Vela of New York, who arrived on the San Blas, the reports of the war in Guatemala have been greatly exaggerated. Consul Castillo says: "The revolution in our country is confined entirely to San Marcos, Quezaltenango and the port of Ocos." Dr. Vela says: "I am more than surprised at the interest taken by Americans in this little uprising. I can state officially that the whole thing is overdrawn. The riot is confined to one or two insignificant ports, and that will be all controlled within four weeks."

IF GREECE FAILED TO ACCEPT PEACE.

Germany Threatened to Withdraw from the Concert of Powers.

ATHENS, Oct. 1.—The contents of the white book presented to the chamber are now generally known. It confirms the statement that Germany threatened to withdraw from the concert of the powers in the event of Greece not accepting the peace conditions, and it also confirms the statements made regarding the warning to Greece which the French minister for foreign affairs, M. Hanotaux, issued May 29 relative to the internal situation of the country, declaring that any attack upon the dynasty would threaten the very existence of Greece.

General Weyler's Resignation Forwarded.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Herald's Havana correspondent telegraphs: I am informed on high authority that Captain General Weyler has sent his resignation to Madrid, to take effect as soon as practicable. General Weyler's resignation is one of the results of the resignation of the Azcarraga ministry, and is due to his belief that a Liberal cabinet will be placed in power in Spain.

American College for Girls Under the Sultan's Sanction.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—Advices received here state that the American college for girls at Constantinople has opened the new year under the imperial sanction of the sultan, with a good attendance of Bulgarians, Turks and students of other nationalities, and also with a legacy of $10,000 and land upon which to erect a new science building.

SENATOR FAIR'S ESTATE.

Report of the Appraisers Places it at Only $12,000,000 or $15,000,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—The Call says today that the appraisers of the late James G. Fair's estate have completed their task, and will present their report to the probate court in a few days. The report will show that the value of the Fair estate has been very much over-estimated. Instead of being valued at from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000, the appraisers say the official figures will be about $12,000,000, and certainly not more than $15,000,000. These figures have been reached after seven months of continuous and careful work by the appraisers. Fair's fortune is invested for the most part in real estate, the greater part of which is in this city, but the principal item of the estate consists of $1,000,000 in bonds of the Southern Pacific coast railway, built by Fair and now a part of the Southern Pacific system.

WOODS FULL OF THEM.

Hunters Ready for the Deer-Shooting Season in Maine.

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 1.—What is confidently expected to be the greatest deer-shooting season in the history of Maine opened today, and the woods are full of hunters waiting for the first legal chance to get a shot at the big game. During the past few days hundreds of sportsmen from New England and the Middle states, and some from distant parts of the country, have passed through this city to the Northern game regions. Last year there were transported over the Bangor & Aroostook railroad 2,215 deer, 155 moose and 120 caribou. This year it is thought that the deer record will be broken, while the number of moose and caribou may fall off somewhat. A new law has cut down the moose-hunting season, so that, while formerly it was the same as the deer season—October 1 to January 1—it is now from October 15 to December 1. The fish and game commissioners have appointed Wardens Nichols of Foxcroft and Neal of Pittsfield to inspect all game shipments through Bangor, and a sharp lookout will be kept for game in transit not accompanied by its owners.

WRECKED BY A MOB.

Church and Printing Plant of an Obnoxious Sect Destroyed.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 1.—Report comes from Fuller postoffice, in the southern part of Benton county, of the wrecking of a church and printing office set up near there by a sect calling themselves the "Brethren of the Church of Christ in Love and Union." A man styling himself Rev. L. S. Garrett is at the head of the community, the members of which hold their property in common. Free love is said to be one of the tenets of their faith, and its practice brought down upon the community the wrath of the outsiders. In the third story of their church building Garrett printed a paper called "The World's Crescent." A hundred farmers raided the building, destroyed the press, piled the forms and threw the type into the street. Garrett had been warned of the raid and was not to be found by the regulators.

LITTLE CHANGE.

Both Sides in the Brockton Shoe Strike Stand Firm.

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—The union leaders have been busy this morning talking with some of the manufacturers. Secretary McSherry was in conference with the firm of Joyce & Fletcher during the forenoon, but whether with any result is as yet unknown. There is little change to be found in the strike situation from the union standpoint. The men are still doing duty as pickets at their own shops, and are constantly intercepting men. Those that go in, they claim, are not experienced men, and will have to be taught. The work and are of no practical value to the manufacturers. A tour among the manufacturers today found things much the same from their standpoint. Only a few insignificant orders, they say in general, have been countermanded, and the larger orders will be filled as usual, barring some delay. Several of the manufacturers were waited upon by members of the union yesterday with the view of entering an adjustment up on the basis which has already been accepted by four firms. As far as could be learned, the manufacturers declined to settle.

Freight Wreck on the Boston & Maine.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 1.—A bad freight wreck occurred on the Boston & Maine road, just above the Connecticut river lumber company's plant in Holyoke, between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning, blocking all traffic between that city and Northampton. Nine cars were telescoped through some unknown cause. Passengers on the early trains were transferred around the wreck, while through trains were sent through by way of Springfield, Westfield and Northampton. There is no estimate on the loss. The tracks will probably be cleared late today.

GERMANY AND SAMOA.

British Possession Would be Preferred to American Occupation.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—The officials of the United States embassy and of the United States consulate here say there is no truth in the story, contained in a despatch from Berlin to the Daily Chronicle of London, saying that President McKinley has instructed the United States consul general at Berlin (in the absence of Ambassador White) to give an opinion as to an alteration of the Samoan treaty, and that it was believed that the United States intends to invite a new conference on the subject. It was added that Germany was certain to object strenuously to any weakening of her hold on Samoa, and that the complete cession of the group of islands to Great Britain would meet with far more support in Berlin than would American occupation of the islands. The Vossische Zeitung expresses the opinion that Samoa ought to become German, as two-third of the trade is owned by Germans. The Vossische Zeitung also says: "The existing treaty must be abolished and order re-established." Other newspapers express similar views on the subject.

New Candidate for Bishop Coadjutor.

[Special despatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1.—The Rhode Island Protestant Episcopal convention will hold its adjourned session to elect a bishop coadjutor in this city Tuesday, October 19. A new candidate for the position has appeared in the person of Rev. Dr. William M. Bodine, who has been rector of the Church of the Saviour, Philadelphia, since 1893, and was for fifteen years president of Kenyon College, Ohio. He has often officiated at Grace Church in this city and about ten years ago conducted a mission there, so that he is well known here. He is a man of wide educational and ecclesiastical work, and is at present editor of "The Parson's Outlook" department in the "Clerical Standard."

Surgeon General Bates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The President today appointed Newton C. Bates, U. S. N., surgeon general and chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery of the navy. He succeeds Surgeon General Tryon.

NAVAL NOTES.

Secretary Long has christened the thirty-knot torpedo boats which were authorized by the last naval appropriation law, and contracts for which were recently awarded. No. 19 will be known as the Stringham, after Captain S. H. Stringham, who commanded the United States fleet at the capture of Forts Hatteras and Clark. The Goldsborough will be the name of No. 20, in honor of Rear Admiral L. M. Goldsborough, who commanded the North Atlantic squadron at the capture of Roanoke Island and Elizabeth City. No. 21 will be called the Bailey, because of the gallantry displayed by Captain Theodorus Bailey during the attack of the Union forces on Forts Jackson and St. Philip.

Dispatch boat Dolphin, now at Norfolk, will shortly proceed to New York for repairs, after which she will go to Boston, where her officers will make arrangements with the officials there for the part the navy is to take in the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the launching of the famous frigate Constitution. It is earnestly hoped that either Secretary Long or Assistant Secretary Roosevelt will go to Boston on the Dolphin.

A permanent rendezvous in Chicago and temporary rendezvouses throughout the West and South will be established for the enlistment of men in the naval service, if the recommendations of Lieutenant Commander J. M. Hawley are adopted. Lieutenant Hawley recently visited the lake ports and established temporary rendezvouses in Chicago, Duluth, Detroit and Milwaukee, and obtained several men well adapted for service in the navy. He has submitted his report to Secretary Long, showing the desirability of establishing stations at the places recommended. Lieutenant Commander Hawley visited Buffalo, Chicago, Milwaukee and Detroit, and during thirty-four days, when the rendezvouses were open, he enlisted two hundred and thirty-four men and boys, all American citizens, and a very large percentage American born.

This Morning's News.

BALTIMORE BEATEN.

Yesterday's Games Practically Give Boston the Pennant.

Brooklyn, Oct. 1.—The contest for the league pennant of 1897 practically came to an end with the conclusion of yesterday's game at Eastern park. Boston won the game, while Washington trimmed the champions, which leaves the Bostons the undisputed champions for 1897. Even should the Baltimores win both games, they can only attain a percentage of 700 points. Should the Brooklyns win from the Bostons Saturday, the latter still would have a percentage of .701.

HUGH DUFFY.

The scenes at yesterday's game beggar description. In the second inning when the Bostons scored five runs, which gave them a safe lead, men and women alike arose in their seats and yelled like demons. When the lead became so great that there was no more hope for the home team, the most faithful joined the Bostons and their rooters, and for a time nobody could hear anything else but people yelling "Boston." It was a great day for baseball in Brooklyn, and one that is not likely to be forgotten very quickly by those who attended.

Young Dunn was put in the box to fool the new champions, but Captain Griffin might as well have stood up a wooden man. The beaneaters had on their batting clothes, and the faster Dunn tossed them across the plate the harder Captain Duffy's men could line the leather out. The only trouble was that the batting was all on one side. The home team could do but little with Klobedanz, the Boston twirler. About the only time they hit him with any effect was in the third inning, when they scored all their runs.

FRANK G. SELEE.

The fielding, like the batting, was one-sided. Brooklyn made only four actual errors, but then some of the players are guilty of some of the most stupid plays seen in many a day. The Bostons' work in the field was simply marvelous. Nothing seemed too hard for them to get. Lowe and Long alone cut off about four hits by their brilliant fielding.

Although the championship is settled, Saturday's game will prove important in many ways, as the local fans are already preparing to give the team from the Hub a great reception. The score:

BALTIMORES LOSE.

Washingtons Take One of the Games Played in That City.

Baltimore, Oct. 1.—The ghost of a chance that Baltimore had to win the pennant for next season no longer exists. It vanished early in yesterday's game when the senators fell upon Dr. Pond's curves, batted him out of the box and took a good long lead in the fourth inning, after which the "orioles" seemed to lose heart, and played listlessly and without ambition. In the meantime the score board was showing how easily the Bostonians were taking their game away from Brooklyn in Brooklyn, and the last vestige of hope slowly died out in the breasts of the faithful of faithful "rooters" who still cling to the belief that Brooklyn might take one from the leaders and give the "birds" a chance to catch up by winning all four from the senators. Those who have studied the game closely, however, had no such hope, as it was apparent to them that the Washington men had been playing in better form than have those from Brooklyn in recent games. Then it was known that the Washington managers were very anxious to win at least one from Baltimore, and would not be displeased to have the pennant go to Boston. To them, therefore, the result of yesterday's game was not unexpected.

The outcome of both games was watched, however, with great interest, and wherever crowds gathered bulletins were read to them. In almost every instance the news that Boston had clinched it and that the championship was no longer in doubt was received with satisfaction, and in some cases with cheers. This was notably the case at Pimlico, where the result by innings was read from the announcer's box during the trotting races in progress there. A postponed game was played today, and with Saturday's contest the season in Baltimore will come to an end. On Sunday morning the orioles will depart for Boston with the hope that they may at least save the Temple cup and gather in the lion's share of the gate receipts.

The story of the game is like the story of a stern chase at sea. Washington started the run getting in the very first inning. The score:

Batteries—Pond, Amole and Robinson; Mercer and McGuire.

New York, Oct. 1.—The New Yorks hit the ball when hits meant runs yesterday afternoon, and thus they won the second game of the closing series from the Philadelphias. Both Seymour and Wheeler were hit hard. The game was slow and featureless except for the batting of Lajoie, Davis and Clark. The score:

New York ....4 0 0 1 1 0 0 0 —6
Philadelphia ....2 0 2 0 1 0 0 0 0—5

Batteries—Seymour, Zearfoss and Warner; Wheeler and Boyle.

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 1.—The game between the Syracuses and the Torontos was for blood from the start, and no better or more exciting contest was ever seen here. Syracuse had what looked like a dangerous lead when the locals went in for their half of the ninth. Five runs were needed to tie the score. Freeman got a base on balls. Casey and Smith hit safely, scoring Freeman. Wagner flew out to Shiebeck and Taylor slapped a grounder down to Smith, who tried to make a double on the play, but bungled it and only caught Smith at second. Then Williams popped up a fly on the third base line which Ryan tried hard for, but missed, and another run was in and two men were on bases. Lush, with two strikes credited against him, saved the game by poking the ball over the fence, scoring three runs and tieing the score. It was quite dark and Swartwood called the game. The two teams will play off the tie on Saturday in Toronto. There were nearly 1000 people in the grounds and they literally went crazy at the redfire climax. The score:

Syracuse ....0 0 0 3 4 0 2 0 2—11

Batteries—Malarkey and Ryan; Williams and Casey.

Pacers In a Fighting Contest.

Readville, Mass., Oct. 1.—There was excellent racing at the Breeders' meeting at Readville park yesterday afternoon. The 2:11 pace was a fighting contest throughout, the first heat being particularly close, the five leaders finishing in a bunch. Cadet got a poor send-off in the first two heats and was unable to finish better than fifth, but in the next three heats he was all right and won them all, although he had no cinch.

The 2:19 trot was another fine exhibition. George A made a bad break in the first that lost him the heat, but he steadied and took the next three. Bismark won the 2:15 trot handily and Loma, a daughter of the trotting king, Arion, secured the match race with Hazel after dropping one heat, making two of Arion's get that have entered the twenties during the meeting.

Racing In New Jersey.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 1.—There were 5000 persons on the fair grounds yesterday. The racing was by far the best ever seen on the interstate grounds. In the 2:22 trotting class, Hotnella Wilkes, owned by C. Hendrickson of this city, broke the world's record for a 3-year-old on a half mile track. The time was 2:16¼, made in the second heat. Wilkes won the race, taking the third and fourth heats in 2:17¼ and 2:18.

John E. Gentry's Work.

Malone, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The famous trotters, Robert J. and John E. Gentry, were driven an exhibition mile at the Franklin county fair yesterday. The interest in the horses was very great. John E. Gentry went a mile in 2:05½, lowering the state record, which has hitherto stood at 2:05¾. Robert J. made a mile in 2:09½.

Playout of Hand Tubs.

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 1.—Yesterday was firemen's day of merchants' week in this city, and thousands of visitors were on the streets. The feature of the forenoon was the parade of the Haverhill department and visiting tubs. The playout of hand tubs attracted an immense crowd. There was a tremendous [illegible] but fair records were made. The [illegible] of the Newton veterans won the first prize of $200 in gold, throwing a stream 195 feet 11 inches. The Red Jackets of Cambridge won second, [illegible] inches.

Can Read Its Title Clear.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The state department has dashed the hopes of another fortune hunter, who, it would appear, narrowly escaped being victimized by sharpers. In this case two residents of Chi[illegible] represented to be heirs to the Wa[illegible] estate in England. United States Consul Grinnell of Manchester, by direction of the department of state, made an investigation and found that while there was a magnificent estate of that name near Manchester it is owned by a family which can trace title for 100 years.

SETH LOW ENDORSED

By the German American Reform Union.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The German-American Reform Union through its executive committee tonight endorsed Seth Low for the mayoralty, after waiting in vain for Tammany to recognize the organization and nominate a candidate the union could support. It was pretty well known in advance what the union would do, for the Tammany slate had been announced in the afternoon.

The committee when they learned the result of the Tammany convention resolved to recommend to the general committee the endorsement of Seth Low, the candidate of the Citizens' Union. This body is said to control many thousand votes in local politics, and its endorsement means many votes for Mr. Low. The committee further authorized and directed its conference committee to confer and co-operate with the Citizens' Union and other organizations, and to unite with them for the nomination of candidates for city and county offices in the interest of good government.

SLATE OF TAMMANY.

Judge Van Wyck Its Candidate for Mayor of New York.

New York, Oct. 1.—The first Democratic convention for the nomination of officers of the city of Greater New York was held yesterday. A noticeable feature of the decorations was the absence of the pictures of the old leaders of the Democratic party which were always displayed over the platform at previous conventions.

When the convention was called to order at 8:12 by John C. Sheehan there were fully 4000 people in the hall. Just before Mr. Sheehan rapped for order the hall was thrown into an uproar by a scrimmage in the section occupied by the New York delegation. Alderman Tait got into a wordy argument with another delegate, and before anyone could prevent it a rough and tumble fight was in progress. No particular damage was done owing to interference of other delegates. Alderman Tait struck his opponent several blows before they were separated. Three policemen succeeded in getting the alderman away and order was restored.

The portion of the platform condemning the Raines law evoked considerable enthusiasm, as did the reference to the propriety of the municipality owning public franchises. The platform practically ignores national issues, declaring at the outset: "We regard as the supreme issue of the municipal campaign the inauguration of a wise, liberal, honest and Democratic government in place of the present costly, wasteful, illiberal and inefficient administration."

The present administration is condemned, and it is said to have produced "a corrupt, expensive, fractious, discordant, intolerant and incapable government that has impaired the credit and increased and augmented the debt of the city."

Justice McCarthy placed in nomination for mayor Justice Robert A. Van Wyck, and ex-Judge Troy of Brooklyn seconded the nomination. John J. Foote of Brooklyn protested against the vote of the borough of Brooklyn being cast for Van Wyck.

Bernard J. York had already announced the vote of the entire Brooklyn delegation for Van Wyck. There was the wildest kind of an uproar for several minutes. There were cries for Foote to take the platform and shouts from the gallery of "No gag law: give him a show. Free speech." In endeavoring to restore order the chairman nearly split the table with his gavel. He pounded away, but the crowd kept up the racket, during which Mr. Foote climbed on the platform and demanded a hearing. Chairman Jenkins ruled that Foote could not be heard. He said that a motion had been adopted that the chairman of each borough should cast the vote of the delegation, and that Mr. Foote could not have any say. After a futile effort Mr. Foote left the platform. He wanted to nominate Justice Gaynor, but he did not get a chance to even mention his name.

The announcement that Van Wyck was the choice of the convention was the signal for a storm of hisses from a large portion of the audience, and from the Brooklyn delegation from the Twenty-first district, which it took the band to drown. John Shea of Brooklyn placed in nomination Bird S. Coler of Brooklyn for comptroller, and Coler was unanimously nominated. Jacob Ruppert, Jr., was named for president of the council.

TRACEY'S PREDICTION.

Says That Republicans Will Elect Their Ticket In New York.

New York, Oct. 1.—The Brooklyn Standard Union has the following interview with General Tracey: "The Republican party will win the coming election."

"Does that mean, general, that you will be the first mayor of Greater New York?"

"Now, I didn't say that. I really must not say anything further, as the battle lines are not fully laid out as yet. In a few days you will see."

In reply to a question as to whether he had seen Mr. Low, General Tracey said: "I have not as yet seen or had any communication with Mr. Low. No, I have not as yet given him any assurances of any kind."

Asked if he would explain his two "as yets," the general said he was not explaining anything, and would ask his Republican friends here to rely on his assurance that victory would rest with the Republican party.

Senator Platt is also quoted as saying: "I am not talking just now. The managers of the Citizens' union are doing all the talking, and they have talked their heads off and wearied their candidate."

"Do you mean that Mr. Low is weary of the union?"

"Well, I notice he's keeping pretty quiet lately," said the senator.

Capture of Bank Robbers.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 1.—Officers have arrived from the Hole-in-the-wall country, having in their custody three Belle Fourche bank robbers, whose capture was only effected after a lively fight in which one of the robbers, Frank Jones, was wounded in the arm. The men, who give their names as Frank Jones, Tom Jones and Walt Putner, deny any connection with the robbery of the bank, or that they are members of the Curry gang, so badly wanted in the Northwest for various crimes. One of the posse which arrested them was a witness to the hold-up, and is positive that they are the right men. All danger of trouble from a mob is passed.

Turkey to Resist the British Advance.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The latest Egyptian advices received here say that the sultan has decided to offer strong resistance to the British advance up the Nile. A large force of dervishes under the command of Emir Mohamud is now at Metemneh, and batteries are being erected near the sixth cataract for the purpose of obstructing the further advance of the forces of General Kitchener, commanding the Anglo-Egyptian troops.

EVIDENCE NOT ENOUGH.

Acquittal of One of Those Implicated in a Furniture Scandal.

Fall River, Oct. 1.—The Gillan bribery hearing was resumed yesterday afternoon. Mayor Greene testified to talks with Bobrick and that he had voted to award the contract to Bobrick, but later the award to the Chandler company was made unanimous.

Attorney Costello, for Gillan, argued that there was no evidence showing that Gillan ever advised or incited Hoag to ask a bribe. The Boston interview was the foundation of the prosecution, and he claimed that it was irrelevant. It was for the purpose of drawing Bobrick out. He claimed that the case was incited by Bobrick through jealousy of Butler. When Costello spoke of Bobrick's reputation, the latter shouted "You lie."

Justice Lovatt threatened Bobrick with punishment for contempt if the words were repeated, and then reproved Costello for mentioning the matter.

Milton Reed, for the prosecution, argued that the case was based on the statutory law, that provides that whoever aids a felony may be indicted, whether the original felon is indicted or not, and whether the act occurs in the state or on the high seas. Thus the Boston meeting of Gillan and Bobrick affects the case. He dwelt on the fact that the defendant had not taken the stand to deny the charge and show that he had no criminal connection with the affair. He said that the best citizens want the support of the court in the crusade against corruption.

Justice Lovett said it did not appear that Gillan had advised Hoag and that the visit to Boston might give the inference of either guilt or innocence. He then ordered Gillan's discharge. Mr. Reed then said he should retire from the other case against Gillan in connection with Shay, leaving it with the court, which ordered a continuance to Oct. 11.

Dismasted In a Hurricane.

Boston, Oct. 1.—Captain Collin Smith, the first officer of the Clyde line steamer Delaware, which arrived here yesterday from Jacksonville, Fla., and Charleston, reports that about three hours after leaving Jacksonville they passed the schooner John Paul of Mt. Desert, Me., totally dismasted, with loss of part of her decklead, in tow of the famous filibustering steamer Three Friends, bound to Mayport, Fla. The Paul was on a passage from Brunswick, Ga., to New York, and was caught in the recent hurricane off the southern coast.

Captain Coombs of the brig Mary Gibbs, which arrived at Providence Monday from Turk's Island, reports that when 350 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras his vessel passed between two terrific hurricanes, escaping, however, their full effects. At this time a large eagle that had been caught in the gale flew aboard ship, almost exhausted, and was easily captured. The bird, which has become quite tame, measures six feet tip to tip of its wings. The trip was made in the remarkably quick time of 12 days.

Warships on the Lakes.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—The Mail and Empire, in an editorial, says: In 1817 the United States proposed to Great Britain that the naval force to be maintained on the lakes by each government should be confined to the following vessels: On Lake Ontario, one vessel, not exceeding 100 tons burden, and armed with one 18-pound cannon; on the upper lakes, two such vessels, similarly armed; on Lake Champlain, one vessel. It was further proposed that all other armed vessels should be dismantled, and that no further vessels of war should be built or armed on the lakes. To all this her majesty's government agreed.

Now the United States is sending to the upper lakes the warship Yantic, of 910 tons, as a training vessel. She is not to be armed when she passes through the canals, as that would violate the agreement, but a rapid-firing battery is to be placed on board of her at Erie, Pa. The attention of the government at Ottawa is directed to these facts. We have no war vessels on the lakes and do not want them. Why should the international agreement be broken by the United States?

MR. HOY MADE UP THE LOSS.

Mission at Sendai, Japan, Robbed by Natives of $5,600.

READING, Penn., Sept. 30.—It became known yesterday that the mission at Sendai, Japan, in charge of Rev. W. E. Hoy, formerly of Lancaster county, Penn., was robbed seven years ago by armed natives of $5,600 in gold. Mr. Hoy did not report the loss to the reformed board of foreign missions, but, to avoid embarrassing the board, has toiled all these years to make up the loss, by his own efforts. Six years later returning missionaries mentioned the matter to Rev. James I. Good of this city, president of the board. At a special meeting of the board, held in Harrisburg last week, it was decided to reimburse Mr. Hoy.

HELEN KELLER'S WORK.

A little child lived in black silence. There never was midnight so dense as the darkness that enveloped his mind. Sight and hearing were gone utterly and forever. The child knew absolutely nothing, except that sometimes from somewhere Something put food into his mouth, and moved him when necessary. His world was limited by as much of his little crib as he could feel with his hands, and by the touch of this Something that cared for his wants.

The merest babe knows the sunlight and its mother's voice and face. Five years had passed over this little boy as he lay on his hospital cot, but he knew less than a month-old infant--less, indeed, than the least of the beasts of the field. He was completely shut up in a living tomb of flesh, with no communication between himself and the great world about him. Yet within that prison was a healthy brain, open to all the possibilities of life.

Since the terrible sickness that had come to him in infancy, little Tommy Stringer had lain thus among strangers. His mother was dead; his father could not help him. From his birthplace in Washington, Pennsylvania, the helpless sufferer had been removed to a hospital in Allegheny. But no institution wanted this troublesome charge, who would require the constant attention of a teacher. So the almshouse seemed the only haven for Tommy. There, at least, he could find a shelter.

But it was not to be so. Light was ahead—the glorious light of knowledge. One who had been similarly shut in by the walls of a triple affliction was to lead Tommy Stringer out into the bright light that she herself enjoyed. It was during the summer of 1890 that the news of Tommy's sad plight came to Helen Keller. The sensitive soul of this ten-year-old girl was deeply affected. She, if no one else, would save the poor boy.

Thenceforth Tommy became the burden of Helen's thought and conversation. She talked about him to her friends; she wrote letter upon letter asking aid for him. At this time occurred a pathetic incident that was the means of turning toward the little blind boy the kindly interest and generous gifts that accomplished his rescue.

The pet and playmate of Helen when she was at home was a beautiful Newfoundland dog. Through a foolish blunder, this animal was shot by a policeman. When the news came to Helen she had no word of reproach, but simply said, with beautiful charity, "I am sure they never could have done it if they had only known what a dear, good dog 'Lioness' was."

The story of her love was published widely, and from far and near--even from across the ocean—came to Helen offers of money for another dog. The little girl had only one answer to all these kind expressions: she was grateful, but she did not care for another dog to take the place of Lioness. Nevertheless, the gift would be accepted, if the donor so desired, on behalf of a little deaf, dumb and blind boy, for whom she was trying to raise money enough to bring him to Boston to be educated.

In every direction Helen sent this message, always in a specially written personal letter that was marked by the sweet simplicity and remarkable ability of the author. For a long time these letters averaged eight a day, and a marvelously versatile and eloquent little pleader Helen showed herself. She also wrote for newspapers articles addressed to children, as well as general appeals—never any two precisely alike. Helen instituted for herself a rigorous course of self-denial (abstinence from soda-water and other prized luxuries,) that she might save money for her one great object. The result of all this effort was the securing of sufficient funds to insure Tommy at least two years of education at the Kindergarten for the Blind, Jamaica Plain, Mass.—[William T. Ellis, in October St. Nicholas.

THE OLD WINDMILLS OF THIS ISLAND.

Many generations of youthful readers have laughed almost immoderately over the funny adventures of Don Quixote in the rare old book of the same name, written by Cervantes, a Spanish author of some celebrity. This valiant knight in "armor clad," with lance in hand, against the remonstrance of his trusty lieutenant, Sancho Panza, attacked an old mill, his heated imagination conceiving it to be a veritable giant.

Rhode Islanders never weary of talking about and conjecturing the origin and history of the antiquated ruin that forms one of the principal attractions on Touro Park.

Until comparatively a few years ago there were twelve or fifteen windmills on this island, all propelled by wind-power, and from the settlement of Aquidneck every bushel of Indian corn was within their circular walls pulverized into meal of the finest quality, and which was sometimes exported to quite distant cities.

Mr. Thomas R. Hazard, in a quaint and interesting volume published several years before his death, describes this New England luxury with so much earnestness and enthusiasm that few Yankee breakfast tables are now without this palatable and equally healthful food.

One youthful poet, who may in the far future rank with Byron, Shelley, Burns, Cowper and even the present poet-laureate of England, Austin, has, after hours of deep meditation by the side of the student's midnight lamp, at last given to the world the charming metrical lines:

"Of all the clouds that fly the air,
The black, the blue, the red,
Of all the cake my mother makes,
Give me her nice corn bread."

Not many years ago several of these windmills were situated on what is now known as upper Broadway, and one on Beach street, run by a Mr. Harkness, from its convenient position was much patronized by residents of the hill. There were several windmills, also, in various locations in Middletown and Portsmouth. The one owned by the Boyd Brothers is still supplying customers.

Cash was never paid the miller for the grinding of the grain, but a certain number of quarts, called "toll," were taken from each bushel of meal, which he received for his services.

By the comparatively slow process of grinding by wind-power, the meal did not become heated; consequently, the musty flavor sometimes observable in steam-ground corn was entirely obviated.

During a stiff breeze these unique-looking mills, with their revolving wings or arms draped with snowy-white canvas, presented a picturesque appearance, and the early strangers in Newport often seemed fascinated by their strange and almost weird appearance. The shadows however, that they cast upon the highways often proved a menace, and it was no unusual occurrence for spirited horses to be alarmed by them and, consequently, in a few minutes be beyond the control of their drivers.

About thirty years ago the town authorities ordered the removal of these mills from the compact parts of the town, and now if a person wishes to view one of these circular and weather-stained and shingled institutions of the past, he will discover it only in the most remote and sequestered places on this island.

Many of these professional millers belonged to the denomination known as the Friends, and their calm but not inexpressive faces were always restful to look upon. They usually wore a white felt hat, and their clothing in summer was of duck cloth, and in winter of some thick material of gray or drab.

It is disappointing to the antiquarian to discover that this very respectable industry, like many others in this vicinity, is gradually departing, and the romance and almost halo that for years surrounded the Yankee johnnycake will, it is feared, in the near future be ranked in the category of lost luxuries. BODICE WITH NEW COLLAR.

The colors which promise to take the lead this season are prune, green, a blue shading toward violet, and black.

The gown shown in the accompanying illustration is of prune-colored ottoman. The braiding on the plastron of velvet is done in white and black; black braid decorating other parts of the gown. The belt is of the same green velvet. The V-shaped chemisette is of white Liberty silk. The flaring collar, cut in battlements, is a new pattern on waists, and is extremely stylish. These and the plain flaring collars are much used, though many gowns are finished with a plain standing collar, which hooks invisibly at the back, without adornment of any kind.

The turban worn with this gown is one of those creations which are the choice of this season. The most extreme combinations here meet, velvet and tulle being combined in a most fascinating manner. The one illustrated has a velvet brim, with a crown of white tulle shirred in folds which stand erect, making a soft, furry mass of great delicacy. The turban is one of the most stylish shapes, both for dress occasions, when it is made of silk fabrics, and for general wear, in felts and cloth.

....At a recent celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Miss Frances E. Willard by the Philadelphia Women's Christian Temperance Union a woman offered this toast or sentiment: "Frances Willard—never in war, always for peace, and first in the hearts of her comrades as the embodiment of all that is best and noblest in her sex."

....Joseph Proctor, a veteran actor, is critically ill at his boarding place in Boston, and it is believed that he can survive only a short time. For more than sixty years Mr. Proctor has been a well known figure in the theatrical world. In 1883 he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the American stage. In 1839 he played Jibbenainosay in "Nick of the Woods," in its original production. This was one of his greatest successes, and he gave more than two thousand performances. For the next twenty years he devoted himself to Shakespearian roles. He retired from the stage several years ago and opened a school of acting in New York.

WARD CAUCUSES AND CITY CONVENTIONS.

The Republicans have arranged for the ward caucuses and conventions to nominate candidates for senator, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Charles H. Burdick, and for city officers. For the senatorial nomination the ward caucuses will be held Thursday evening, October 7, and the city convention Monday evening, October 11, and for the city election the ward caucuses will be Thursday, October 21, when candidates for the board of aldermen, common council, warden and ward clerk will be nominated, and delegates elected to the city convention to be held the following evening, when candidates will be nominated for mayor, city treasurer and four members of the school committee, to succeed Messrs. Franklin, Gilpin, Sayer and Langley, whose terms will expire on the first Monday in January next.

BARON OPPENHEIM.

That stalwart and faultlessly dressed nobleman, Baron Eugene Oppenheim, has sailed away for Europe on steamship Paris. The baron will be missed. He is rich, a good fellow, a fine business man, and consequently popular. When he first appeared at Newport this season he was honored by a dinner card from Mrs. Astor, and from that hour he had no lack of invitations. Unfortunately he had to hurry away to Venezuela on business, and returned only two weeks ago. Although the baron has removed his athletic presence from this city he leaves behind an interesting rumor regarding the possibility of his engagement to a very wealthy widow of New York. Baron Oppenheim has expressed himself as determined to visit New York and Newport again next summer.--[New York Commercial Advertiser.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Advertisements, without special position, $1 a square for the first insertion and 25 cents for each continuance. Ten lines, or less, nonpariel type (or five-sixths of an inch) make a square. Yearly or Term Advertisers are limited to their immediate business, are guaranteed but five insertions in a week, and are allowed twenty-five changes a year. Electrotypes will be used without extra charge if solid metal; "wood backs" cannot be used with safety to the press.

Advertisers using both the daily and weekly papers receive a discount on the combined rates and gain the advantage of distinct classes of readers, no person reading both the daily and weekly. The Journal goes among people who read no other local paper.

THE SPANISH WAR CLOUD.

That there are serious complications existing between this country and Spain is not to be denied. But they are not of the nature or the extent which is represented by the jingo press, and are not at all likely to result in war. In fact, they would not have existed at all had not the Spaniards been made to believe that we were contemplating an infraction of their rights by the seizure and appropriation of a portion of their territory. They have been taught to believe this by the Yellow Kid and sensational newspapers in New York, which have been representing the American people as threatening to wrest from them the fairest jewel in their crown. Not knowing these sensational papers as we do, and the irresponsibility of those jingo leaders, they are not able to appreciate the facts of the situation.

The high-toned jingoists in Congress, as well as those connected with the press, have treated the coming of war between the two nations almost as a certainty. They have gone as far as to outline campaigns and pitched battles, and predict results with the utmost confidence. They have even ventured on the representation of international complications in other directions. For example, they tell us that, as Austria is attached to Spain through family ties, that country is prepared to support the Spanish throne in any war that may be undertaken, and that Germany, which has been prejudiced against us for some time, will join in the alliance. On the other hand, it is declared to be not at all likely that England, France or Russia would give Spain any support whatever, and each of these might possibly come to our help. To make the matter short, they picture the result of the interference of the American people in Cuban affairs as a general war disturbing and involving the peace of all Europe, and appear to glory in the prospect. Says one of these political seers: "We must expect to meet with hardships and reverses if drawn into a conflict even with Spain alone, but we are certain to be successful in the end, and would be against Spain, Germany and Austria as certainly as against Hispaniola. And, in all probability, if such a combination was made against us, other European nations would be likely to ally with us." And so on.

These blood and thunder predictions are now largely based upon the supposed report that General Woodford goes to Madrid carrying an ultimatum of a most threatening and positive character. The sensational newspapers in New York and elsewhere know full well that they are responsible for this report, and that it has no foundation in fact. President McKinley himself is authority for the statement that his letter of instruction to General Woodford contains nothing to warrant the inference that this country seeks occasion for a break in its friendly relations with Spain. On the contrary, in conversation with a recent visitor to the White House he said that when his letter to General Woodford was published the American public would be entirely satisfied that it represented the conservative sentiment of the country in regard to our relations with Cuba and Spain. It contains no ultimatums nor threats of war. In calm, dispassionate terms it sets forth the American view of the destructive struggle that has desolated the richest island of the West Indies. It records and justifies the intense interest which that struggle has excited throughout the United States, and shows how our government cannot be indifferent to a condition of affairs that demands constant precautions against the violation of its neutrality obligations by adventurous sympathizers with Cuban insurgents.

With the attitude of Mr. McKinley and the administration as a whole the people of this country should be fully satisfied. And but for the persistent misrepresentations on the part of certain demagogues, the Spaniards would be equally so. No sensible statesman in this country would tolerate the thought of the seizure of Cuba and its forcible addition to our territory. Whether favorable to the theory of annexation or not, the case is the same. We are not a nation of land pirates, however aggressive some of our people may be. The friends of Cuban annexation desire it through purchase rather than through the arbitrament of war. We have added largely to our territory in the past, but can glory in the fact that not one square mile has ever come to us except through honorable means. Florida, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Alaska, have all been added to our domain, but not an inch of this vast region has been stolen, or captured through our superior strength or the advantages afforded by our situation. We have sometimes been willing to buy, but never to steal.

INDEPENDENT POLITICS.

One of the good things growing out of the independence of the voters when it comes to the casting of their ballots, is that the growing habit in that direction compels the managers of the various parties to name better candidates than they might do otherwise. The time has gone by when it is possible to elect a nominee simply because he bears the label of regularity. The cases are indeed rare in these times when a nomination is equivalent to an election. A marked illustration of the truth of this statement is furnished by the municipal contest now going on in Greater New York.

In this case the presentation of the name of Seth Low makes it absolutely essential, if the Republican party hopes to win, that it should present an equally good man. On the face of things it appears that the party has done so, but no one believes for a moment that the Platt machine would have named General Tracy as its representative if it had not felt compelled to do so in order to even hope for success. The real differences between Platt and Tracy, so far as political conscience and political methods are concerned, are as great as between Platt and Low, the only presumable advantage being that, as Platt names Tracy, he has reason to hope that he may to some extent influence and control him.

The influence of the Citizens' Union movement was equally prominent in the nominations made at Tammany Hall last evening. Had the chiefs of that organization felt that their cause was not imperilled with a man of the Croker-Sheehan class, they would not have indulged a thought of Judge Van Wyck as their leader. As it is Tammany has presented as good a candidate to the public as has Platt, and both machines took action in this direction under pressure from Low. And so, the Democratic platform adopted by Tammany is wholly unexceptionable. It devotes itself to local interests and local responsibilities. National issues are wholly ignored, not the slightest mention having been made of Bryan, the Chicago platform, the tariff or national politics in general.

It is now likely that we are to have two Democratic candidates and two Republicans, and all of the highest respectability. How this will affect the outcome does not yet fully appear, but it is thought that the Low interest is greatly advanced by this condition of affairs. With Henry George leading the free silver men, Judge Van Wyck standing for the more conservative portion of the party, and General Tracy standing for, but not representing, the Platt and Quigg interests, Seth Low has by far the best chance of coming in the winner. We believe he would have been successful in any case, but this seems to make it reasonably sure.

PRISON BARBARITIES.

There have been numerous complaints of late concerning the condition of the Southern penitentiaries, and we judge not without reason. To all appearances that at Richmond, Va., is one of the best, but even there the horrors are almost indescribable. The facts are brought out, in a discussion over the question of prison labor, that the cells, which are none too large for one prisoner, have each six occupants, and are, at the same time, badly ventilated. Says the Dispatch of that city: "The hospital, too, is grossly inadequate. There is one big room for whites and another for blacks. When a man is dying in either room his sick companions cannot but witness his death struggles, and hear him fighting for breath. This is a wretched arrangement, yet for lack of room nothing better can be done."

Such accounts as this may throw some light on the long-drawn-out controversy over the treatment of Northern prisoners in Southern prisons during the war, concerning which opinions are known to differ. Perhaps it may come down to this, that the difference is largely dependent upon the standpoint from which it is viewed. This condition being the estimate of what is proper in ordinary prison life, the cruelties of Libby and Andersonville are very naturally viewed as a matter of course. But with higher ideals, such as exist in the North, such a mode of prison life, both in peace and in war, is but an off-shoot of the barbarism of the Dark Ages.

Governor Wolcott of Massachusetts has filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of Insurance Commissioner Merrill, by the promotion of Deputy Commissioner Frederick L. Cutting. The new commissioner is a native of Boston and was educated in the public schools of that city; he served for three years in the Fortieth Massachusetts volunteer infantry, and has been connected with the insurance commissioner's office since January 16, 1872, twenty-two years as chief clerk and three years as deputy. His appointment meets with the universal approval of the insurance men of the state, and is evidently, like all of Governor Wolcott's appointments, an excellent one.

Tammany's candidate for mayor of New York, Judge Robert A. Van Wyck, is a distinguished lawyer and jurist, and comes of one of the old Knickerbocker families. On his paternal side he is a descendant in the seventh generation of Cornelius Barents Van Wyck, who came to New Netherlands in 1650 from the town of Wyck, erlands in 1650 from the town of Wyck, King's county. Ann, daughter of Rev. Johannes Theodorus Polhemus, the first Dutch reform minister in that county. He is hardly a man of the Tammany stripe.

The story comes from New York this morning that the chances of Seth Low becoming the Republican candidate for mayor are improving, and that his manifest determination not to withdraw from the field under any circumstances is gradually bringing the Republican leaders to terms. It is also reported that Senator Platt is receiving with more favor the idea of accepting Low, as great pressure has been brought to bear upon him by Republicans in the national councils to take no chances with Tammany.

Attention is called to the fact that a regular press bureau has been maintained in the interest of Hawaii, the same as in the case of Cuba, for several years. Very much of the information put before the public has its origin at this point, and not a little of the news from the Sandwich Islands during all this time has been as unreliable as that from Key West, which has been dated Havana. This is one of the modern ways of creating and influencing public opinion. And the process is still going on.

It may be taken as an illustration of the old saying that misery loves company, that W. J. Bryan expressed himself pleased when he heard the news that George Fred Williams had been nominated in the old Bay State. Even the boy orator knows that George Fred will go down under the load, and yet he makes haste to get into the same boat.

And now there is to be a railroad up Mt. Sinai, which seems almost a desecration of one of the most sacred spots on the face of the earth. But there is no help for it, and before long restaurants, telephones and telegraphs will be found not only on the summit, but at the various way stations.

Captain General Weyler has again tendered his resignation, and it is said that this time it will be accepted. Such stories have been told before, and almost times without number, but the conditions are such that the report may well be credited.

It is not supposed that Neal Dow, the great temperance orator and legislator, will live many hours longer. He goes down to the grave full of years and honors, and will leave a record of a long life of usefulness, seldom surpassed.

If it turns out that the burning of Dawson, up in Alaska, is true, the winter terrors of that inhospitable country will be greatly increased. With neither sufficient food nor shelter the miners' cup of woe will be filled to the brim.

Mayor Patrick J. Gleason of Long Island City is first in the field as a candidate for mayor of the greater city. His motto is "Neither Tea nor Tiger." He says he has 41,300 signatures to his nomination papers.

The Gold Democrats of Massachusetts nominated a ticket for state officers for principle only, and with no idea of conquest.

Boston is supremely happy now that her base ball club is assured of the championship.

Talk is said to be cheap, but not over the long-distance telephone.

CORN AT PARIS IN 1900.

Comparatively few Americans take any real interest in the representation of our industries at Paris in 1900. What Europe buys of us being to the extent of some 50 per cent the agricultural products which she is compelled to buy, and the demand for these being fixed and imperative, and, moreover, these products not being of a kind to make an attractive showing at an exhibition, it is commonly assumed that there is no business for us to do in Paris.

This view may be in the main correct, but there are some important qualifications to be made. In the first place, there is some danger that the demand for our food products may be diverted by retaliatory legislation. In the next place it is not wholly true that that demand cannot be increased. Wheat, indeed, we sell in competition with the whole world, and we cannot by taking thought add to the European demand for wheat. But wheat is not our most important cereal. That place belongs to corn, of which we raised in 1895 2,151,138,580 bushels, of the value of $541,585,534, against 462,102,947 bushels of wheat, of the value of $237,938,998. On the other hand, of that year's crop we exported but 27,691,137 bushels, of the value of $14,650,767, against 76,102,704 bushels of wheat, of the value of $43,805,663.

In other words, while we found a market abroad for one-sixth of our wheat crop, we found such a market for only one-eightieth of our corn crop. If we could have stimulated the foreign demand for our corn to the same proportion as that for our wheat, we should have been $90,000,00 better off. Moreover, there would be the advantage in stimulating a demand for corn that it is a much more trustworthy crop than wheat, and that we have very much more nearly a monopoly of its production. There are other wheat lands as good or nearly as good as the best of ours, but there is no other equal area in the world which has anything like the same natural advantages for the production of corn as the valley of the Mississippi. If we could only create an effective demand for it, it would become our most important "money crop" and the chief article in our commerce, as it is already the chief cereal in our agriculture.

The European demand for corn is now confined to the Latin countries. In Italy it has long superseded the original barley as the material of the national polenta, or mush, and it is used also for food in Spain and Portugal. But in western and middle Europe there is absolutely no demand for it for human food, and only a small demand for it as horse feed. What is needed is a literal "exposition" of its desirableness as food, and the Paris exposition will supply the opportunity for such a showing. As we know, the range of its usefulness, from mush and hominy and hoe cake to corn rolls, is very wide. While it is not available by itself for bread, there are many Americans now, though comparatively fewer than in earlier generations, who are aware how much better a bread is made from the mixture of "rye and Indian" than from either grain alone. To introduce this mixture among the rye-bread-eating populations of eastern and southeastern Europe would be to insure for that one of its ingredients which cannot be raised there a steady and profitable demand.

It is by no means beneath the dignity of the Department of Agriculture to undertake at Paris such an exposition of the edible qualities of our most abundant crop. No private person or association has sufficient inducement to undertake such a work. It is a matter for the government. Austro-Hungary has recognized the public interest in profitable exports by assuming the inspection of wines for export. The governments of Japan and of Ceylon have in like manner, taken charge of the work of pushing the native teas. But all these products together are of trifling importance compared with the possibilities of adding to the national wealth by making Europe as familiar as America with the uses of the greatest of our cereal crops.—[New York Times.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1, 8 A. M.—For New England—Fair tonight and Saturday; slightly cooler; winds shifting to northerly.

FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY.

BOSTON, Oct. 1, 8 A. M.—For Boston and vicinity—Fair tonight and Saturday; cooler Saturday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The simple statement that fair and mild weather is the prevailing feature throughout the country leaves little to record of today's conditions. Hardly a station reports clouds, and as for precipitation within the last twenty-four hours there are but two stations reporting an appreciable amount. These are Jupiter and Key West, Fla. The barometer is not below normal at Key West, but a heavy northeast rainstorm is on at that place, indicating a disturbance in the Gulf of Mexico. There is nothing elsewhere to show storm developments. High pressure covers the entire eastern country, and the "high" area north of the Lakes will give us slightly cooler weather Saturday. The temperature has risen decidedly in Eastern sections, and high temperature continues in the fever districts of the South. The range in New England is from 51, at Eastport and Northfield, Vt., to 66, at Boston.

In But One Way Can the Smoothness and the purity of good whiskey be arrived at and that is by age. The loss to the owners is large because of evaporation, but their loss is the consumers' gain, for the subtle changes which the incomparable chemist, Nature, brings about cannot be obtained by any scientific or chemical process. 11—The bears adopted the same tactics in raiding the market as they did yesterday, by attacking leading stocks in order to create a demoralization in the general list. St. Louis & San Francisco first preferred was forced down 2⅜, New Jersey Central 2¼, Manhattan and Sugar 2¼, Missouri Pacific 2⅛, and numerous other shares an average of a point.

Noon—Money on call, steady, at 2½ @ 3 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 4½ @ 5 per cent; sterling exchange, heavy, at $4.81¾ @ ½ and 4.82¼ @ ½; posted rates, $4.83 @ 84, and 4.85½ @ 86; commercial bills, $4.81; silver certificates, 54⅝ @ 56; bar silver, 55⅞; Mexican dollars, 42⅞; government bonds, firm; 4s reg., 125⅝ @ 126⅛; 4s coup., 125⅜. The character of the speculation underwent a change in the hour before noon, and the market rallied strongly on the buying, showing great animation. Shorts covered freely and helped the rise. The recovery extended to a point or more in many stocks. Northern Pacific preferred and Brooklyn Transit were conspicuously strong, gaining over a point net, and many other stocks were carried above last night's level. The bond market was weak, and trading was light. Sales to noon, 253,209.

WHEELS AND LIGHTS.

Annual Lantern Parade of the Powhattan Club.

The annual lantern parade under the direction of the Powhattan Cycle Club took place last evening, and proved to be the most successful ever given here. The weather was ideal for spectators, being as pleasant as in August; there was not enough wind to affect the lanterns, the light was ample to allow a good view of the parade, and everybody seemed satisfied.

Long before the appointed hour for starting, Washington square was filled with spectators and bicyclists, of all sorts and conditions, and sorts of actions. The arrival of the decorated wheels, which began to appear about 7:30, caused the chief interest to centre along Broadway, from the State House to Bull street, where the fancy and comically attired riders and the "girls" were assembled. Here were found some very pretty effects in wheels and costumes, but few lanterns. Some of those were not lighted, the experience of previous years causing the riders to depend on other than lantern effects, which the wind might so easily neutralize. The only real lantern display was by the Tiger Cycle Club of Fall River, all of whose members carried lanterns, some on Japanese parasols, making with the blue uniforms and white-trimmed wheels, a very pretty effect.

Among the original designs were a good imitation of a tramp, two Klondike prospectors, rigged out with about everything; two cowboys; a very good lighthouse, showing a red lantern; the lone fisherman; the "Yellow Kid," "Liz" and "Mame;" a boy with a cornucopia hat, and a big one; a Noah's ark; a butcher shop, full of the various articles to be found in such a shop, all with price lists; a girl with dolls in place of candles in her lanterns; a straw wheel, and a floral display, with two floral wheels revolving windmill fashion—a very pretty effect.

The comical effects included a great many blackened faces disguised as Topsies of the wheel, and some as simple country negroes, together with a variety of others that had to be labeled before one would know what they were. All the riders were up to fun, and there was skylarking all over the route. Perhaps the most comical thing to the crowd at the start was the last exhibit—a regular hayseed, towed by two wheelers. It looked as though the crowd would not let him get off the square, but it did.

The Newport Artillery bicycle squad, under Colonel Barker, presented a fine appearance with its bicyclers, guidon-bearers and riders in almost perfect alignment, and capable of preserving it through the march. There were thirty-eight men in line.

The Naval Reserves, twenty-one strong, with a tandem for the standard-bearer, and under Ensign Carry, made a very pretty showing. They appeared in "whites," with guns, blankets, canteens, signal flags and other impedimenta necessary for active service, and looked like business. When it is known that the detachment was not organized until the night before, some idea of what workers the riders were can be had by those who saw them ride.

The Tiger bicycle club of Fall River, sixteen in number, under Captain Gilchrist, added to the success of the parade.

It was 8.15 when Assistant Marshal Hermann Frasch, in full war paint and buckskin suit, started ahead of the line, followed by the five aids from the Powhattan Cycle Club, in white uniforms, white-trimmed wheels and flags. Next came the judges in a carriage, followed by the Artillery cycle squad, Colonel Barker in command; then the Naval Reserve buglers and the Naval Reserves, both detachments wheeling four abreast; the original designs; the Fall River Tigers; the girls, and last the comical riders.

It took about eight minutes to get the riders across the starting line. All seemed well able to control their wheels, for, except the lighthouse, there were no bulky designs, the riders taking lessons from former experiences. The route of march was covered in one hour, and could have been done much more rapidly, with greater comfort. Along Thames street, which was crowded, the procession had a good send-off in red fire to the general disgust of the spectators. On Rhode Island avenue Colonel Landers gave the line a good display of fireworks.

At 9:15 the procession wheeled onto Washington square and lined up on either side, opposite the Mall, while the judges—Congressman Bull, Postmaster Young, State Auditor A. C. Landers and Mr. F. M. Wheeler—inspected the various exhibits and awarded the prizes. The awards, as later announced, were as follows:

Fancy Costume—1, Joseph Tubley, as a prince; 2, George Parrott, prince; 3, Frederick Fries, prince; 4, John Powers, prince; 5, Frank Knight, Spaniard; 6, Edward Ellis, girl.

Original Design—1, Walter Delaitre, floral design and revolving wheels; 2, Alfred Parrott, city butcher; 3, Harold Sherman, lighthouse; 4, R. D. Graham, Klondiker; 5, John Rous, lone fisherman; 6, John R. Chase, tiger trainer; honorable mention, Herman Frasch.

Ladies' Class—1, Miss Reitz; 2, Thomas Knowe; 3, C. C. Latham; 4, A. B. Davis; 5, L. Clarke.

Comical design—1, Herman Arnold, farmer; 2, Arthur Parrott, football player; 3, George Ellis, Quaker; 4, Henry Halleck, "Yellow Kid;" 5, Edward H. Caswell, old man; 6, Alfred Gatzemeier, colored girl; 7, Howard Asher, colored girl; 8, J. F. Adams, Uncle Sam.

Special for Best Illuminated Wheel—1, George Parrott; 2, Thomas Knowe.

The latter caught on best with the girls on the square during the half hour it took to judge, and divided interest with the comical and "Ladies'" sections. The latter did have a number of real, bona fide girl riders in it.

At 9:52 the Artillery squad started for the armory amid applause, and the parade was over. Everybody seemed satisfied that it was a success.

BODY FOUND OFF BEAVERTAIL.

This morning while Dr. W. T. Bull and his brother, Congressman Melville Bull, were fishing off Beavertail from Captain "Tom" Shea's naphtha launch, they espied what proved to be a body floating. The body was taken in tow and brought to Kinsley's wharf, and Medical Examiner Stewart was summoned. No inquest was deemed necessary. The body was turned over to Undertaker Cottrell and prepared for burial at the city's expense. September 17, off Beavertail, a schooner collided with and sank a nameless fishing smack, and one of the sailors on the latter, Joseph Anthony, was drowned. It is supposed that the body found today was that of the sailor, who, when last seen, was clad in oilskins. The body brought here was similarly attired. The sailor, who shipped in Boston, was supposed to belong in Nova Scotia.

THE SECOND MYOPIA TEAM WINS EASILY AT BROOKLYN.

The Southampton polo team met the Myopia second team at Prospect park, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, in the final game for the prizes of the Riding and Driving Club, and when play ceased the spectators were just able to discern the figures 17 after the name of Myopia and 2¾ after Southampton. The handicapper decreed that the Southamptons should concede 3 goals to the Myopias, but at the close of the game it seemed evident that the victors should have been penalized about 10 goals. The teams lined up in this order:

Myopia—C. C. Rice, 1; H. H. Holmes, 2; George H. Willis, Jr., 3; F. B. Fay, back.

Southampton—R. J. Delier, 1; H. K. Vingut, 2; J. M. Waterbury, 3; C. A. Stevens, back.

The summary is as follows:

Myopia—Total goals by play, 11; conceded by handicap, 3; total score, 17.

PROFIT IN POULTRY.

What an Enterprising Man with Small Capital May Do.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman describes a poultry farm he visited some time ago to show what an enterprising farmer who is looking for larger profits can accomplish. A small farm, mostly in timber, but having a few acres of tillable land and a comfortable house, had been purchased very cheap. The timber had been cut and nearly enough lumber and stove wood marketed to pay for the farm. A part of the lumber had been saved and used for building poultry houses. Several of these houses had been cheaply built out of the rough lumber, the owner doing most of the work himself. They were double boarded, with paper between the boards; also board roofs and earth floors were made, and windows on the south side. They were made very warm, but no money was spent on appearance or ornament. The inside fixtures were few and simple. The houses were 30 to 40 feet long and about 12 feet wide. On one side were the perches, running the whole length of the building, with a platform under them. On the other side were nest boxes and feeding troughs. The space between these was given to the hens for a scratching floor, and covered with hay or straw.

These houses were several rods apart, and from one hundred to one hundred and fifty fowls were kept in each. The houses contained no divisions, and the fowls were not yarded, but had the whole range of the farm. Instead of fencing in the hens, he had fenced in his garden and other places he wished to protect from them. Near the buildings were springs of running water. This water had been carried to some of the houses in pipes, so that fresh water was easily provided for the fowls. Centrally located among the houses was a granary, which was quite large, and contained a stove with a large kettle for cooking the meat which was fed to the hens in the winter. In the building was also a power bone mill for grinding the bones.

But few chickens are raised on the farm. Every fall the owner starts out with a large wagon filled with crates to buy chickens. He buys both the pullets and cockerels at the market price by weight, keeps the pullets for his laying stock and ships the cockerels to the city. He keeps his hens two years and then crates them alive and ships them to the city market in August and September, so he must replace one half of his stock every year. He obtains nearly as much for the fowls he sells as they cost, so saves the trouble and expense of raising chickens. Of course by this plan he cannot keep thoroughbred stock, but he says that he is in the business for the money there is in it, and there is more money for him in buying chickens than in raising them.

The reason why this man is able to make a good profit from his hens is that the greater part of their food is produced on the farm. As fast as his land was cleared it was sown with grain, which saved his money in buying grain for his hens, and now, after years of hard toil, he has removed the stumps and stones and fitted his land for growing crops, so that now he can grow about all that is wanted for his hens and team, and their manure furnishes the fertilizer. His family do most of the work in caring for the hens in the summer, so that he is able to give his time to his farm work.

His hens pay him a profit of nearly $1 each, for there is but little outlay for feed. Probably $760 to $800 is received for eggs. A buyer comes after them twice a week, and as he can get so many clean and fresh eggs at one place he pays 1 to 2 cents above his price for common eggs. If to the amount received for eggs we add the produce of the orchard and garden, house rent, etc., the income is about $1,000 per year, with an investment of only perhaps $3,000.

There are many small farms, of twenty-five to fifty acres, with a house and other buildings, that in these times can be purchased very cheaply, and an outlay of a few hundred dollars more would erect suitable buildings and stock them with poultry. Ten or fifteen acres of oats, buckwheat, corn and perhaps other grains, with cut clover, milk, etc., would furnish feed for over five hundred fowl. Two or three cows could be kept, and fruit and vegetables grown for family use. For a man and family of children who can assist in caring for the poultry, and who has some capital, there seems to be a better prospect to make a living than in dairying or other kinds of farming at the present time. Nearly every business is full and pushed to the utmost, and because of the intense competition and large production the margins are growing smaller. If we engage in a business that requires skill and the close attention to details that many persons are not willing to give it, we can, to a certain extent, get out of the general competition and make fair profits.

ROBERT GOELET'S NEW YACHT.

Robert Goelet has commissioned Captain Churchhill to take command of his magnificent steam yacht Nahma, which was delivered Wednesday by the builders, the Clydebank Shipbuilding Company. Captain Churchill had the Nahma put into dry dock on the Clyde to have her thoroughly examined and her hull cleaned, after which she will set out for New York.

The internal decorations, which were executed by two dozen Parisians, are pronounced to be the finest on board any Clyde-built ship. She will have a crew of seventy-five men.

VERY CARELESS WITH HIS MONEY.

The death of Tom Coffin this week at Lovell removes a well known character from Maine's list of eccentric people. The stories of his strange doings are endless. His valuable horses were shot dead when they displeased his royal highness. His furniture has furnished material for making a bonfire. He carted away the front steps of his house once, because some passerby chanced to sit down on them one day. He has been known to keep $15,000 in money in a basket in his parlor, and would go away for days leaving it in charge of his servants. Sometimes he would carry about with him a grip stuffed with $30,000 in bills, and on one occasion before starting for Boston, not wishing to be bothered with so much money, he carelessly emptied it upon the floor of a closet, and there left it while he was gone. The same gripful of money he once absent-mindedly left in a village store over night, never thinking to hunt it up till the next day. And so he rolled in wealth and scattered it to the four winds, and died penniless and friendless, a victim of the morphine habit.—[Lewiston Journal.

JAMESTOWN.

Mrs. L. E. Sears closed her cottage here yesterday, and left for New York.

General and Mrs. A. M. McCook left today for their winter home, very much pleased with their summer's visit to Jamestown. They have arranged to come here again next season.

Mr. J. P. Kohler has decided to remain as superintendent of the Jamestown and Newport ferries until November. Mr. Kohler was engaged in May to fill the position until October 1, but his management of the business of the company has been so satisfactory to the directors that at their meeting in September they requested him to remain through the year. As Mr. Kohler has business interests in New York that may require his attention he is unable to decide at present whether he will remain with the company.

TIVERTON CASES IN COURT.

In the district court today Charles Cain and John Garvey of Tiverton were tried for maintaining common nuisances. Cain was discharged and Garvey held in $1,000 bonds for the higher court.

The adultery case against Robert Stewart of Tiverton, so far as the prosecution went, was heard and Stewart was bound over in $500 for trial. He also furnished bail.

Thomas J. Harwood of Tiverton was tried on two charges of selling liquor, pleaded nolo, was fined $20 and sentenced to ten days on each. He appealed.

Liquors of Manuel Silvia, Michael St. Pierre and T. J. Harwood of Tiverton were forfeited.

Prose nursery tales have even a greater substratum of truth than nursery rhymes, and one of the most veracious is the pathetic one of the Babes in the Wood. THE OLD WAY

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Indigestion by Dieting a Barbarous and Useless One.

We say the old way, but really it is a very common one at present time and many dyspeptics and physicians as well consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment Dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from Dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the Dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good, wholesome, well-cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of Dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. One of these tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat or eggs.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the purest and safest remedy sold for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50 cts. for full sized package at all drug stores.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

At the request of the committee on buildings, a special meeting of the school committee was called for last evening, to hear a report on the condition of the cellar of the Potter school building. The committee reported that the cellar was in a very wretched condition, and from a sanitary point of view was decidedly dangerous. It recommended that the proposition of Sheldon H. Curtis to remedy the evil for $310 be accepted, and the recommendation was adopted.

Miss Elizabeth C. Boss, on account of illness, was granted a leave of absence for three months, and Miss Mary L. Thurston, who has been the substitute in the school, was chosen to fill the vacancy.

THE ROBER COMPANY.

Miss Katherine Rober and her company presented the "Clemenceau Case" at the Opera House last evening before a good-sized audience, and as usual gave general satisfaction. This afternoon "A Heroine in Rags" was repeated, and this evening a new play, "Moths in Society," which has been dramatized from Ouida's novel, "Moths," will be given. The week's engagement will be concluded tomorrow with two performances, "Fanchon" being repeated in the afternoon and a comedy, "Miss Dixie," being given in the evening.

TORPEDO FLOTILLA READY FOR ITS CRUISE.

The repairs to the vessels of the torpedo flotilla have been completed, and the boats leave the Brooklyn navy yard today for a cruise down the coast. The vessels will probably go outside of Sandy Hook for a preliminary run to adjust compasses and shake down the new parts added to the engines prior to going on their cruise.

The vessels will stop at New Orleans and will proceed up the Mississippi river as far as St. Louis, and it is expected that they will be gone about six months. The flotilla will be under the command of Lieutenant Commander W. W. Kimball.

WHAT PARIS KNOWS OF AMERICA.

The Petit Parisien has a larger circulation than any other Paris journal. It sells 500,000 copies a day, and is read by the great middle class, the backbone of the nation. It therefore represents what the real Paris, perhaps the real France, knows of the rest of the world. Its leader-writers have a reputation for scholarship and honesty. They are accounted authorities on things American. What they say France believes. Here are some examples of what they say and, presumably, France believes: "Canada is indeed a great country, and it may well be proud of having been the birthplace of the patriot George Washington." "The city of Eureka Springs, one of the most beautiful towns of far Arkansas, which lies on a beautiful bay of the Pacific ocean. * * * "The United States has no war power. Its navy is composed of a few modern ships which cannot put to sea, and its army, or what it calls an army, is made up of a great many generals and a few negro and Indian troops of no discipline, and poorly armed. * * * Either Japan or Spain would find the vanquishing of the presumptuous Yankees an easy task."

The Petit Parisien also prints serial stories. The opening chapters of one of these have their scene laid in America. The heroine, living in a "château" twenty miles from the Battery, desires on a certain occasion to go for a walk, but fears to do so "on account of the Indians, reports of whose depredations had lately come to her ears." We have been accustomed to making merry at the expense of untraveled Englishmen, who, when they have a friend about to visit New York, are liable to load him down with messages and parcels for some other friend in Tombstone or Tacoma. But this geographical naiveté is ripe wisdom beside the ingenuousness of the Parisian editor, when he writes of "all the great rivers of Siberia flowing into the Antarctic ocean."—Illustrated American.

MISS KENDAL'S FAN.

She was rather a smart young woman. He thought himself an uncommonly smart young man.

Now, between these two definitions there is a good deal of difference both in mind, body and estate. Of course they both had bodies, else wherefore record them in these pages? But she had the mind and he had the estate, while, as for those two attributes—well, to quote Miss May Kendal, "What a world apart they are, my dear!"

Having spent all she had on her smartest dress to go to her best party in, the necessary shoes therefor nearly broke her, and her mamma absolutely refused to advance her any more on her next quarter's allowance. But her mind was quite at ease respecting gloves and stockings, for the army had supplied her with one and the navy with the other under cover of a little betting, which was strictly proper, for are they not sister services?

But her fan was sadly broken. So this economical young woman spent the afternoon before this special party, sitting with her back to the light to give her complexion every chance, mending the improvident fan with a weak solution of gum and water. Why weak solution: Well, she knew what she was about better than you would.

So she went with her estimable mamma, and she danced. As I hinted before, she was personable—very—and she had a taking way with her when she liked, and she had a cool head, which is better than rubles and sometimes leads to them, and, though she did not have to live by her wits, she frequently made them afford various little additions to her toilet, and that is no small matter to a smart young woman.

So she danced and was sought after. And presently, while she was sitting out, her partner took hold of that guileless fan. In an instant it was broken, and her little cry of distress quite went to his heart. Being rather impecunious himself, young Schilling knew how difficult it was to raise the ready coin at every moment's notice.

"Doesn't half match your dress," he said, as she examined it carefully, saying she must try if it could be mended. "Don't bother about it. I'll send you another."

"How awfully sweet! And it's just like you to think of matching my dress." Her tone was charming.

Then presently she went into supper with a man whom she had met two or three times and knew vaguely as one knows quadrates of casual acquaintances. But it was only that evening she had heard him described as very rich, and it made her thoughtful. This was the young man with body and estate. He thought her uncommonly smart.

"How slippery these silks are!" she said as they finished supper. It was a sit down one and of remarkable virtue. "Do you think you could pick up my fan for me. It has dropped down at your side?"

He pushed back his chair and stooped. "Oh, it's broken!" she cried, bending too.

At that moment Mr. Gould lifted his head. There was a slight collision. She blushed charmingly and he held the fan awkwardly in his hand. The sticks were smashed across.

Then that first young man passed on the other side of the table. He took in the situation, and he smiled an evil smile. She blushed deeply. The man of opulence stuttered.

"Shall we go back into the dancing room?" she said softly, but she did not put out her hand for the fan, so he carried it.

"I'm awfully sorry," said Mr. Gould for the second time when they were in the corridor.

"It was an old friend," she rejoined plaintively. "Shall we turn into the library and cremate the relics? I can't bear the idea of its being thrown on the dust heap."

When they stood by the fire, he offered it to her, but she shook her head, smiling this time. "No, that is too cruel. You did it, and you must burn the poor thing."

"I'm awfully sorry," he said for the third time. "May—er—may I not send you another?"

"Oh, but this was of no value really. I can get one myself."

"No. Do let me. It was all my clumsiness. Let me have your address, and I'll send you one."

She hesitated, paused expressively, till, lifting her eyes to him, she murmured, "Will you bring it, then?"

She went home that evening and dreamed of having silver brushes with the most elaborate monograms procurable. But the rich young man fatuously conversed with his old schoolfellow, the poor young man, who threw himself in his way. So they became righteously indignant together over the artfulness of her scheming.

"Let's send her one of those Japanese paper things," said young Schilling. "Come around to my rooms. We'll find one there and do it up, with our kind regards."

"All right," said young Gould, yawning, for he was half asleep and easily led.

So they made up the parcel together. But Schilling rather overdid his part, and Gould, at the last moment relenting, pulled his card out again while the other had his back turned hunting for sealing wax and kept his own counsel. After all, he was a gentleman at heart, which the other never was nor could be.

And the next day Gould sent her a lovely fan from the Burlington arcade, for he was ashamed of the way they had talked about her that night, and he avoided Schilling, whom he saw in the club.

Then she wrote him such a charming little note. And then he met her unexpectedly at church parade one Sunday—it was all the church he did in those days. And three weeks later they were engaged to be married, and she had three sets of hairbrushes given her right off and did not like any of them.

Young Schilling thinks him an awful idiot to have been taken in by a girl like that. But she is very pleased; she did not want a clever man at all. She has wits enough for both any day.

She will make a very good wife for a rich man, but young Schilling and she would have swindled everybody and come to grief in the end.—New York Journal.

DOROTHY II WON THE SECOND, ALSO

Esperanza Again Easily Defeated in Yesterday's Race.

The Dorothy II, the 39-footer owned by Henry Payne Whitney, but sailed by Herman B. Duryea, defeated A. S. Van Winkle's Esperanza again yesterday, and takes the purse at $500, which was at stake.

It was an easy victory for the Dorothy II, she having the race from the beginning, but not winning by as great a margin as the day before. A strong southwest wind was blowing, and it was decided to sail a course the first leg out to sea, rounding the Brenton's Reef vessel, thence in to Bishop rock up the bay, and thence to the finish line.

The starting gun was fired at 2:27, the Dorothy II crossing on the starboard tack five minutes ahead of the Esperanza on the port tack. The Dorothy II went only a short distance when she came about on the Esperanza's wind, and from that time on had the race in her own hands. Mr. Duryea worked the boat well up to windward, and at the mark off Beavertail was more than two minutes in the lead. After rounding spinnakers were set and the run to Bishop began.

The Dorothy II proved the faster before the wind, and at the second mark was in the lead by three minutes and fifty seconds, having gained a minute and a half. It was a beat home to the finish line, and it was made in quick time, the Dorothy II taking only three long tacks and a short Litch to cross a winner by five minutes and twenty-eight seconds. The official time was as follows:

Boat.	Sailed by.	Finished.	Elapsed Time
Dorothy II.	H. B. Duryea.	4:33:01	2:03:00
Esperanza.	A. S. Van Winkle.	4:36:37	2:11:37

FROM MENDELSSOHN'S "ST. PAUL."

At the service of choral evensong at the United Congregational Church at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening the music will be from Mendelssohn's oratorio of "St. Paul." The quartet consists of Miss Mary G. Curley, soprano; Miss Ella K. Maitland, contralto; Mr. H. F. Brown, tenor, and Mr. Augustus H. Swan, baritone and musical director, with Colonel John Rogers as organist. The following musical program will be rendered:

Organ Prelude, "I Will Sing of Thy Great Mercies."
Recitative, "And Paul came to the congregation." (Acts IX:29, XIII:2-3.)
Directing, "Now are we ambassadors." (II Cor. V:20.)
Quartet, "How lovely are the messengers." (Romans X:15-18.)
Hymn, "Soldiers of Christ, Arise!" Mason.
Gloria Patria, chant Mornington
Quartet, "Sue what love." (I John III:1.
Hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" Sullivan.
Offertory solo, "Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets." (Matt. XXIII:37.) Miss Curley.
Ascription choral, "Sleepers, wake, a voice is calling." (Matt. XXV:1.)
Organ postlude, "O great is the depth."

BLOCK ISLAND FISHERMEN WAITING FOR MACKEREL.

Block Island fishermen are much disappointed at the failure of the fall school of mackerel to strike in. Nearly a score of seining gangs are encamped on Sandy point, the northern extremity of the island, waiting for the annual appearance of the shoal. Last year the first big catch was made September 17. Mackerel are plenty in near-by waters, but the vast schools of bluefish and bonita near the shores have kept the smaller fish too far away for them to be captured in shore nets.

NOVEL GOLF.

There was a novel match at the Golf Club grounds yesterday between W. F. Davis, the club professional, on one side, and A. M. Coats and J. A. Stillman on the other. It was match play, over the full course, and the amateurs had the big advantage of taking the best of their two strokes as the starter for the next. This, of course, gave them a great chance, as it was quite certain that one, at least, both being good players, would make a clever stroke, and they lived up to the promise. Davis was also in fine condition, and made the new course in 92, equalling the record. After 17 holes had been played the score was a tie, and the play on the eighteenth was an even. Davis, however, got in a great put, holing his ball and thus winning out, 1 up, after perhaps the prettiest exhibition of close playing ever seen on the grounds.

NAVAL DRY DOCKS NOT IN CONDITION.

Recent examination of the dry docks of the navy discloses, according to reports of the engineers, a serious state of affairs, and in two instances docks constructed within the last five years are reported badly decayed and liable to give way at any time under heavy strain.

A special meeting of the dock board has been called by Commodore Bunce to meet at the New York navy yard at once to consider the reports on the condition of the timber docks at the New York, League Island, Norfolk and Port Royal naval stations. It is alleged that the new dry dock at the New York yard, known as No. 2, in which nearly all the ships of the large fleet have been docked in the past year, may suffer the same injury any time that made the later dock, known as No. 3, totally unfit for service.

The only timber dock found absolutely solid and strong is that on Puget sound, by far the largest and most costly of any yet built for the navy. The stone docks at Boston, New York and Norfolk are only large enough to admit the smaller types of vessels.

SOCIAL AND CAKEWALK.

"The Health Department" gave a social and cakewalk at Odd Fellows' hall last night that proved a success in every way. Nearly everybody was there—at least, it seemed so—and in consequence all sorts of people were present. There did not appear to be any color line, even in the cakewalk, where one white promenader held out to the last three. The affair was under the management of Lymus E. L. Jones, who proved equal to the occasion, and let the cakewalk in good style. Thomas Pierce acted as floor manager and Frank White prompted. The cakewalk started with eighteen couples, including such well-known walkers as Sam Phillips James Fizz and George Stevens. After a number of promenades and much coaching from the crowd, to which the judges paid no attention, it was decided that George Stevens and partner, Miss Nellie Johnson, had won. This the crowd could have told from the first, but the judges had to go through all the formalities.

CAVE-IN ON THE CLIFFS.

Yesterday morning about 8:30 o'clock those in the vicinity of Ochre Point were startled by two muffled explosions, which caused considerable surprise and some apprehension until it was found that they were occasioned by a cave of the cliffs just at the junction of the George H. Pendleton and H. McK. Twombly estates. The cliff here has been for years very straight, and has been unsupported by a wall or other artificial means such as has been found necessary along so much of the cliff front. That it would fall at the present time, after standing the strain of the past very wet season did not occur to any one. A section estimated as about seven feet wide by thirty feet long dropped off just like a piece of sand bank when undermined by water. It took with it one of the posts of the boundary fence, but did no other damage. The cliff walk at this section was about ten feet from the edge of the cliff, and was not affected by the fall.

ANNUAL FIRE LOSS REDUCED BY IMPROVED METHODS.

The annual loss by fire in the United States amounts to one hundred millions of dollars, and fully one-half of this loss is caused by the water used in extinguishing the fires. Before the introduction, in 1872, of controlling or shut-off nozzles used on the fire-hose, the percentage of loss by water was even greater—at least two-thirds of the total loss. Previous to the introduction of this much-needed device, there was used what was known as an "open pipe," a plain, open nozzle, with no contrivance for shutting off the water. When it was necessary to shut off, the order had to be passed to the engineer, sometimes a long distance from the fire; and unless the nozzle could be thrust from a convenient window, the water would go pouring out, spreading destruction in all directions. In small fires, especially in "upstairs" fires in private dwellings, or in business houses stocked with perishable goods, such as feathers, silks, etc., the unnecessary destruction of property was very great.

Today, fires are fought much more scientifically, and with a great deal more system, than were those of ten or twenty years ago; and officers in command of engine companies are usually very careful not to use any more water than is absolutely necessary. Nearly every hose-wagon in the New York fire department today carries three sizes of hose—the regulation size, 2½ inch, used at all ordinary fires; 3-inch (known as "thistle-alarm hose," and used only at fires of considerable magnitude); and a small hose carried on a reel under the wagon. This hose is 1½ inches in diameter, and very easy to handle, and, on account of the ease with which any number of lengths of it can be carried about, it is that often used at small fires in dwelling-houses, offices, bulkheads and flats. With a controlling nozzle on the end, the firemen can dash up several flights of stairs and into a bedroom or closet, and extinguish a small fire before it has time to spread, using the water only where it is absolutely needed. To drag the regulation size of weight about eighty pounds to the length up and around winding stairways, etc., would take much longer, and perhaps give a fire time to get just beyond the point of easy control; besides, when the water is finally started a great deal more is used by this hose than is necessary, especially in the case of a small fire. It has been practically demonstrated that a considerable amount of fire can be extinguished with a small amount of water applied effectively, and the use of the small hose has done much to reduce the damage by water at fires in dwellings and flats.—[Charles T. Hill, in St. Nicholas for October.

IOWA ROADBUILDING.

Scott County Solves the Problem of Highway Reform.

Scott county, Ia., has suffered mud embargo every spring until patience has at last ceased to be a virtue and the work of securing good roads has been begun in earnest. A correspondent of the Chicago Record describes the methods pursued in pulling highways out of the mud. He says:

About three months ago, for the first time in a history of sixty-four years, the county entered upon a scheme of methodical highway improvement. Starting at the city limits of Davenport, and thence proceeding countryward, five principal roads have so far been taken up, and others are on the list for this season and will soon be reached. Each of these roads is being operated upon for a distance of three to five miles. In all, as the plans for this year's work now stand, about twenty-five miles of new highway are to be built this fall. This aggregate will be so distributed that it will carry the traveler about five miles out of town on each of seven or eight main lines of road.

The first thing to secure is the grade. Sometimes there is considerable hill cutting to do, and sometimes there is filling, for in this country highway lines are often arbitrary and vexed with much meandering up hill and down dale. Then the road is properly guttered at the sides, so that surface water cannot stand on it, and in places that are suspiciously wet, death tile is laid with a good fall and a free outlet, the tile being of size great enough to carry all the water that can percolate to it.

With the substratum thus secure the foundation course of the road is laid. It consists of stone, as generous in size as can be had, laid as flat as is possible at an average of six inches in depth. On top of this footing course, as a builder would call it, is placed a course of macadam, two inches deep. It just fairly fills up the hollows and eliminates the inequalities in the course of unbroken rock beneath. On top of this macadam, which is made to conform closely to the contour of a section of the finished road, is laid four inches of gravel, just as it comes from the bank. Then a three-ton roller gives it an approach to a surface, the rest. The gravel packs, becomes and in a few days natural travel does smooth and finally takes on a surface that bears a close resemblance to concrete, and the harder it is traveled the better it becomes. It shows little dust in dry time, and the rainy weather tests which it has had have proved its staying qualities under that sort of treatment and shown that a hardened gravel surface is as impervious to ordinary dressing as is a good tar and gravel roof.

The first cost of this sort of road is far less than persons in this prairie country have been led to believe. Sixteen-foot roadway is the rule where the line is anywhere near level, and twelve-foot roadway on hills of 5 per cent gradient and over. This road is now costing the country only a trifle over thirty-five cents a lineal foot, or about $1,800 a mile. There is a large difference between this figure and the $4,500 to $1,500 which estimates prove to be a reasonable expectation of the cost of macadam or brick for roadways that are considerably narrower. It means that a road fund can be made to go twice as far as it has been spotted to go.

Of course labor is eliminated as far as possible. The loading of the gravel is placed under contract at the rate of 9 cents a cubic yard. The contractor uses wheel scrapers, which are loaded simply by scooping up the gravel, without preliminary plowing, and which are unloaded by dumping through a hatchway in an elevated driveway into the waiting open car beneath.

Teams take the gravel from the car at the siding nearest the place where it is to be used, and extra handling is avoided in all cases where such avoidance is possible. Some pieces of road are let by contract, when grading or other special work is involved, but most of it is done by men employed as day laborers, worked by a competent overseer, under the personal supervision of one of the county supervisors.

One feature of the road improvement is found in connection with its bridge work. Even instead of wooden bridges have been built, as far as the funds of the county would permit, for a good many years, but with the inauguration of the new system of gravel roads the supervisors have been trying to discard structural bridges as far as possible, replacing them with culverts and earth-work fills. A culvert must be staunch and durable to be good. Stone masonry is generally good, but somewhat costly, especially to a country that affords but little building stone. Cast-iron pipe is good, but open, notably in the large sizes, to the same objection of cost. As a substitute for either this county has been making extensive use of steel boiler shells, specially of old mill boilers. The expense of half a dozen of these new-fangled culverts on the price route that has prevailed here has been less than that of one first class forty-foot bridge.

The bicycle fever is raging in France with great fury, and as the machines are all numbered and taxed it is found that there are 329,816 in France, and last year they brought a revenue of 3,272,239 francs into the national treasury. Paris alone pays 626,916 francs. Most of the machines are of French manufacture, but the rich people usually ride American wheels. They cost about one-third more than those of local manufacture, but are infinitely more comfortable, and much lighter.

It is admitted that Colonel Waring has kept the streets of New York in admirable condition, but politicians who are not in tune with the administration say that he has an abundance of money and would have been a fool or a knave had he thrown away his opportunity. Nevertheless, in a city in which both fools and knaves have been common in public office, Colonel Waring stands out conspicuously as a good example.—[Fall River Herald.
